Using properly trained and experienced operatives to conduct surveillance and carry out investigations is essential to ensure positive results.

All our investigations personnel are highly trained and experienced with backgrounds in UK Special Forces, covert police units and intelligence services.

Technical surveillance can prove an effective and cheaper surveillance tool than physical manpower options. Equipment can be left in place for long periods of time with motion triggers and live video transmission capabilities. Covert cameras, microphones and vehicle tracking devices are commonly used during our intelligence gathering tasks.

The use of covert surveillance is becoming more common in rural communities where an increase in crime has seen the theft of machinery and livestock become a real concern.

Properly documented evidence can prove effective in resolving disputes long before they end up in court. The presentation of accurately gathered surveillance footage and other intelligence is often enough to deter someone from pursuing a legal option.
