A security assessment is the best way to establish any vulnerabilities and to produce a solutions package which strikes a balance between the threat, cost and lifestyle impact.

The threat has changed since the most recent financial downturn. With police budgets being reduced and an ever growing influx of criminal tourists adding to the organised crime fraternity in the UK, the need for private security has increased more than ever. With the increase in domestic counter-terrorism causing a shift in priorities for police and security services, the onus now falls more and more on commercial and private entities to ensure their own security needs are met.

Our security personnel are hand-picked for each client according to their qualifications, skill-sets, experience and where required, their personality. Most of our personnel come from a background in elite military and police units, which is one of the primary reasons we remain at the forefront of the global security industry.

We provide a one-stop shop for all security requirements including physical security, CCTV, alarms, cyber, training, secure communications and equipment procurement all delivered with the highest level of discretion and professionalism.
